REMEMBERING OUR FRIEND AND COLLEAGUE, JEFF ADAMS

For 22 years Jeff was an integral part of our community and a cornerstone of Tarentum water plant operations. His knowledge, dedication, and steady leadership ensured that our residents had safe, reliable water every single day, a responsibility he carried with great pride and professionalism.

We will miss him dearly. Please keep Jeff's family, friends, and loved ones in your thoughts during this difficult time. Tarentum is better because of Jeff, and we will forever be grateful for his many years of dedication and service to our community.

The Tarentum Book Club is celebrating its 125th anniversary! It was established on February 5, 1901, by local women at Mary Alice Dunn's home in the Dunn Hotel. The hotel was originally built in 1845 and later demolished in 1930. The Marathon Gas Station is now found on the site.

The mission of the Tarentum Book Club was to procure the latest books for the use of its members, increase knowledge of the latest authors and gain interest in all literary subjects for social enjoyment. Today a committee selects the annual theme and books, with the club meeting monthly at a member's home.

THE HIGH SCHOOL THAT NEVER WAS

Written by George Guido

The 1960s were known for many things – the Beatles, the Space Race, the Vietnam War, and political assassinations. But for public education – particularly in Western Pennsylvania – the 60s were known as merger mania. During the decade, hundreds of community school districts were consolidated into newly drawn configurations. One original design hit close to home.

On Dec. 17, 1962, Allegheny County education officials forwarded the idea of a school district consisting of Tarentum Borough and Fawn, Frazer, and East Deer townships. Under this plan, the Har-Brack and West Deer school districts would be left intact. Tarentum's neighbors also underwent a variety of proposals – some flew, some didn't. For instance, Springdale and Cheswick boroughs, along with Harmar and Springdale townships, were formalized into the Allegheny Valley School District and older students would attend Springdale High School, many of whom were doing that in the first place. More radically, Oakmont would become part of Plum and Verona would be merged with Penn Hills.

On the eastern side of the Allegheny River, a plan was floated to make Arnold and Lower Burrell one school system and New Kensington and Upper Burrell would unite. Ultimately, the state stepped in and said those municipalities didn't share a common border.

What was behind the merger mania?

State Act 561 of 1961 mandated that about 2,700 community school districts in Pennsylvania would be consolidated into approximately 500 school districts. Up to that time, Tarentum operated a school district that served grades 1-12. So did East Deer, and Frazer eventually came aboard adopting the contraction EDFRA High School. Fawn, like many small municipalities, only carried students in grades 1-8. After that, a similar municipality that did not include a high school had its students pay tuition to go to the high school of their choice.

Tarentum already had relationships with the other three areas. Most Fawn students went to Tarentum High School. East Deer played some of its home football games at Dreshar Stadium when its small field was unable to handle games that drew larger crowds. And don't forget that Tarentum Borough annexed land from Frazer Township on May 29, 1924 from upper West Tarentum around 11th and 12th streets, along with Britton Way, all the way to St. Clement's Cemetery.

But let's circle back to the proposed configuration with Tarentum and the three townships and have some fun. What would the new high school have been called? It would possibly have been called simply the Tarentum Area School District. Or, using the initials of the four municipalities - TEFF. A school in the south-central part of the state representing eastern Lebanon County is known simply as ELCO. Maybe Bull Creek Area High School? How about Peter Chartier High School, named after the 18th Century pioneer whose trading post at the confluence of Bull Creek and Allegheny River gave the area its start? But ol' Pete already has two high schools named after him - Chartiers Valley and Chartiers-Houston.

We'll never know because the PA Department of Education stepped in and insisted that Allegheny County's proposal didn't go far enough and the seven municipalities had to reduce itself to two school districts. Local educators balked, so the state threatened legal action if the Tarentum area didn't dance to the state's merger music.

By 1964, Tarentum and Har-Brack combined and was named the Highlands School District because the terrain of the area resembled that of Scotland. Highlands operated two high schools - Tarentum and Har-Brack - until consolidating in the fall of 1968. Next door, Frazer, along with East Deer and West Deer created Deer Lakes School District, which began operations in 1969.

THE PEOPLES NATIONAL BANK OF TARENTUM

Written by Carrie Fox & Georgie Blackburn, Photos by Hugh Fox

Life in 1900, compared to the complexities and fast pace of today's modern life, was relatively direct. The routines, expectations, and challenges faced by individuals and communities were simpler, allowing for a more measured and unhurried way of living. This simplicity provided a foundation for growth and progress in the years that followed as Tarentum adapted to new opportunities and developments.

The increasing tempo of a new century was apparent! With immense foresight plus the assistance of other progressive citizens and a capital investment of $50,000, William A. Marvin decided to meet the needs of the community by establishing The Peoples National Bank of Tarentum.

On April 5, 1900, a charter was issued and exactly two months later, on June 5, the new bank opened for business at the corner of Fifth Avenue and Wood Street. Sixty-two people purchased stock and were elected as the bank's first Board of Directors.

By the end of business on day one, twenty-seven deposits totaled $12,764.37. The Peoples National Bank of Tarentum had made a grand entrance into the field of finance.

William A. Marvin desired to give dependable banking. While guiding the bank through its formative period, the organization thrived as community confidence soared. By 1901, deposits totaled $126,405.64 and by 1904, they nearly tripled to $344,267.30.

Moving Becomes a Necessity

The Bank's assets grew to over $1,000,000 by 1916 and the organization determined it had outgrown its present location. It had prospered and needed a larger banking house. Plans were drawn for a new three-story structure on a lot at the corner of East Sixth Avenue and Corbet Street, which opened its doors on May 31, 1917.

Step by step the bank kept pace with community progress during a prosperous era and with continued confidence placed in it by many friends, it carried it through the dark days of 1933. While thousands of banks throughout the country were compelled to liquidate, The Peoples National Bank of Tarentum stood strong.

By 1950, Tarentum had a population of 9,540 and The Peoples National Bank had 13,442 accounts. Renovations such as air conditioning and installing the most modern equipment to handle increasing business were completed to expedite, facilitate, and protect customer business transactions.

People's Bank served the Tarentum community for many years.

Resource Center Helps Remove Barriers to Stability and Employment

The WIN Resource Center, located at 228 W. 7th Av., Tarentum serves as a vital community hub for individuals and families facing economic hardship, offering practical resources that help remove barriers to stability, employment, and independence. Designed to meet both immediate needs and long-term challenges, the Resource Center provides a dignified, welcoming space where individuals can access essential supports while working toward self-sufficiency. Many individuals seeking employment face obstacles tied to Social Determinants of Health, including food insecurity, lack of appropriate clothing, limited access to technology, transportation challenges, and unstable support systems. The WIN Resource Center addresses these challenges holistically, recognizing that sustainable employment outcomes are more likely when basic needs are met and individuals are supported with compassion and respect. One of the core services offered at the Resource Center is access to professional and everyday clothing. Individuals preparing for job interviews, returning to the workforce, starting new positions, or rebuilding their lives after crisis are able to select appropriate, modern clothing in a setting designed to preserve dignity. This service helps participants feel confident and prepared as they pursue employment opportunities.

Food insecurity is another critical barrier addressed through the Resource Center. Shelf-stable food and supplemental pantry items are provided to help individuals and families bridge gaps during periods of financial instability. By reducing the pressure of meeting basic nutritional needs, participants are better positioned to focus on job searching, training, and other steps toward long-term stability.

In today's digital economy, access to technology is essential. Many individuals served by the WIN Resource Center do not have reliable internet or computer access at home. The Resource Center offers computers and internet access for job applications, resume development, virtual interviews, telehealth appointments, and digital skill-building. A dedicated private office space allows individuals to participate in confidential virtual meetings, supporting mental health care, recovery services, and professional opportunities that require privacy and focus.

The WIN Resource Center serves a diverse population, including individuals with mental health diagnoses, intellectual and developmental disabilities (IDDs), individuals in recovery from substance use disorders, people impacted by incarceration and reentry, and those experiencing financial hardship. Services are trauma-informed and participant-centered, acknowledging that progress is not linear and that each individual's path forward is unique.

Community involvement plays a significant role in sustaining the Resource Center's impact. Volunteers support daily operations by assisting in the store, organizing donations, stocking pantry items, and helping with special projects. Community members, businesses, and organizations further support the mission by hosting hygiene drives, food drives, clothing drives, and fundraising events.

The Resource Center also operates a store where community members can shop, with proceeds directly supporting programs and services. Shopping at the store provides an opportunity for the broader community to contribute to the mission while helping sustain resources for individuals in need.

Donations remain an essential part of the Resource Center's ability to serve the community. Shelf-stable food items, personal

THE HISTORY OF CHAPMAN PHARMACY

Written by Cindy Homburg

Dr. Alva Lucius Chapman came to Tarentum to start a weekly newspaper but instead opened its first pharmacy in 1886 at 5th Avenue and Wood Street. He had attended the Baltimore College for Physicians and Surgeons in Homewood, a suburb of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Chapman's first pharmacy was destroyed by fire and in 1897, so he built a new two and one-half story Queen Anne style building at Fifth Avenue and Lock Street with a flat roof and a triangle lattice wall dormer.

Despite owning a pharmacy, he teamed up with George Dickey to launch The Tarentum Herald weekly newspaper. The Tarentum Herald eventually merged with the Tarentum Sun to become the Herald Sun which remained in circulation until approximately 1900. Chapman wanted to devote more time to his pharmacy, so the Newspaper operation was suspended. Charles Preston Howe then started the Valley Daily News in June 1904.

Dwight Chapman succeeded his father as store owner, later passing it to his son, Dwight Jr. Dwight Chapman Jr. worked at the pharmacy while in high school, earning seventy-five cents an hour. The soda fountain had ten stools, a few tables for four, and a window that allowed customers to see out, yet impossible to see in from the outside.

On weekends, people stopped by for cherry cokes or ice cream sodas after movies, while prescriptions were handled at the back counter.

The 1936 the St. Patrick's Day Flood reached the store's top shelf, forcing the Chapmans to rebuild from nothing.

son of Jean Chapman Cooper

The prescription counter closed in April 1967 due to low business, and the store was fully closed by November 1968. All prescriptions were transferred to Physician's Pharmacy, which was owned by Charles E. Blackburn.

Dr. Alva L. Chapman, the store's original owner, died on September 30, 1926, and was buried in Prospect Cemetery, Brackenridge, Pa.

Dwight Leonard Chapman Sr. (1897–1971) was born in Tarentum, graduated from Tarentum High School, earned a pharmacy degree from the University of Pittsburgh, served in the U.S. Navy during World War I, and is buried with his father in Prospect Cemetery, Brackenridge, Pa.

Dwight Leonard Chapman Jr. attended Har-Brack High School, Grove City College, and the University of Pittsburgh Pharmacy School. He moved to California in 1974 and continued to work as a pharmacist for approximately thirty years. He passed away on February 7, 2011 and is buried in California.

The era of the hometown, family-owned pharmacy is, for the most part, a thing of the past. However, Chapman's Pharmacy will always be in the heart of Tarentum folk who remember the store and its family.

The closure of the store marked a sorrowful day for the Chapman family and Tarentum.

CELEBRATION
OF AMERICA

250th

THE UNITED STATES AT 250 WHERE THE NEXT CHAPTER IS BEING WRITTEN

Written by Dwight Boddorf, Borough Manager, Hoover Institute Veteran Fellow

In 2026, the United States will mark its 250th anniversary. It is a chance to look back at how the country began, how far it has come, and what comes next. While much of the celebration will focus on national landmarks and big moments in history, the real story of America's future is being written in places like Tarentum, Pennsylvania. Sitting along the Allegheny River, Tarentum has never just been a point on a map. It is a town built by hard work, shaped by change, and held together by people who know that self-government is not a theory. It is something you practice every day.

A Town Built on Doing the Work

From its roots as an industrial town to its role today as a river community, Tarentum follows a familiar American path: adapt, rebuild, and keep moving forward. The factories that once drove the local economy may be quieter now, but the mindset that built them has not disappeared. You see it in new small businesses, in infrastructure projects getting done, and in a community that refuses to be defined only by its past.

Local government here is not symbolic. It is hands on and practical. It is the people making sure the water is safe, the lights stay on, the streets get plowed, and help shows up when someone dials 911. Often that work happens with limited resources and a lot of responsibility. In Tarentum, democracy does not live in monuments. It lives in borough offices, public works garages, council meetings, and volunteer fire halls.

Innovation Grounded in Community

As the country looks ahead to its next 250 years, Tarentum offers a quiet example of what renewal can look like at the local level. The borough has focused on cooperation and long-term thinking, updating utilities, pursuing regional partnerships for public safety, and making investments meant to last.

Instead of chasing flashy ideas or quick wins or, we have focused on building things that hold up over time. Systems that work Services people can rely on. Decisions that are fair to today's and tomorrow's residents.

The Heart of the American Experiment

What makes Tarentum a fitting place to reflect on this milestone is not that it is perfect It is that it keeps going. The American experiment was never supposed to be easy, and towns like Tarentum show why it continues. Civic life here is personal. You know the people involved. You see the outcomes of decisions up close. You feel it when things work and when there is more to fix.

As celebrations unfold across the country, Tarentum exists as a reminder that America's next chapter will not be written only in capitals or headlines. It will be written in communities where people show up, solve problems, and care deeply about the place they call home. At 250 years old, the United States is still a work in progress. In Tarentum, that work continues, steady, local, and hopeful, just as it always has.

THE SENIORS BLUE BOOK YOUR GO TO GUIDE FOR AGING WELL IN PITTSBURGH

Written by Apryl Garrett

When it comes to navigating senior care, most families don't know where to begin, and that's completely understandable. Aging often brings unexpected decisions, emotional conversations, and time-sensitive choices. Having a trusted, easy to use resource can make all the difference. That's exactly why the Seniors Blue Book exists: to help older adults, caregivers, and families throughout the Greater Pittsburgh area find reliable information, local services, and peace of mind.

The Seniors Blue Book is a free, comprehensive resource guide focused entirely on aging well. Many people describe it as the "yellow pages for seniors," but it is much more than a directory. It is an educational tool designed to help families understand their options before, during, and after major life transitions. Instead of feeling overwhelmed by endless online searches, readers can turn to one organized, community-based guide created specifically for older adults and those who support them.

Inside the Seniors Blue Book, you will find information on senior housing options, in-home care, home health services, rehabilitation hospitals, hospice and palliative care, legal and financial professionals, insurance resources, and a wide variety of health, wellness, and community support programs. Each section is thoughtfully arranged to help readers understand not only what services are available, but also when those services might be helpful and what questions to ask along the way.

The guide is designed to inform, not pressure. Its goal is to empower families with knowledge so they can make confident decisions at their own pace. The organizations featured are local providers serving our community, which makes the information both relevant and practical for real life situations.

One of the most important things to know is that the Seniors Blue Book is free to the public. Copies can be found in convenient community locations where families naturally go for support and information. You may see the book at hospitals, doctors' offices, senior centers, libraries, community organizations, and local health and wellness events. It is also distributed at popular neighborhood locations like Giant Eagle Pharmacy counters, Shop 'n Save stores, Walgreens, and Kuhn's Markets, making it easy for families to pick up a copy while running everyday errands.

The guide serves families across Allegheny, Beaver, Butler, Lawrence, Washington, and Westmoreland counties ensuring that the resources included are truly local. This regional focus helps readers find services close to home and professionals who understand the needs of their specific communities.

For those who prefer digital access, additional tools, and information are available online at www.SBBPgh.com. The website features thousands of educational articles covering topics such as caregiving, senior housing, health conditions, financial planning, and aging well. Visitors can access a digital version of the guide and find easy ways to connect with local services. It is an especially helpful resource for adult children who may be supporting loved ones from out of town and need reliable information quickly.

Beyond the printed and online guides, the Seniors Blue Book offers something many families find invaluable: a free referral line.

By calling 412-515-0923, individuals can speak with someone who understands the local senior care landscape and can help point them in the right direction. This service is ideal for people who feel unsure where to start or who need guidance tailored to their unique situation. Whether someone is exploring care after a hospital stay, looking for home care or housing options, or simply trying to understand what services exist, the referral line provides clear, compassionate support at no cost and with no obligation.

Staying informed is another important part of aging well, which is why the Seniors Blue Book also offers a free e-monthly newsletter. This digital update shares information about local events, educational workshops, support groups, and other helpful resources for older adults and caregivers. Anyone can Helping make all of this possible is a strong local partnership behind the scenes. The Seniors Blue Book works with Pittsburgh Delivery Service, Inc., a respected distribution company based in Indianola, Pennsylvania. For more than 30 years, Pittsburgh Delivery Service has provided professional circulation for print publications throughout the Greater Pittsburgh area. Their experience and reliability ensure the Seniors Blue Book is delivered consistently and placed in high-traffic, easy-to-access locations across the region. Their deep knowledge of the community plays an important role in helping this free resource reach the people who need it most.

“As a Pittsburgh native, this community is deeply personal to me,” says Apryl Garrett,

Publisher of the Seniors Blue Book Greater Pittsburgh. “I see families every day who are overwhelmed and unsure where to start. Our goal is to make sure no one feels alone when making decisions about aging by providing trusted local resources and guidance.”

At its heart, the Seniors Blue Book is about making life a little easier during times that can feel uncertain. It brings together trusted information, local connections, and real human support in one place. Families often keep it on a kitchen counter or coffee table, sharing it with neighbors and friends who suddenly find themselves in a caregiving role. Aging is a journey no one should have to navigate alone. With free access to reliable resources, a caring referral line, a helpful newsletter, and both print and online tools, the Seniors Blue Book stands ready to guide Pittsburgh area families every step of the way.
